

REFERENCES CITED

- servant in Rhodesia before World War Two and then as a cook in South Africa in 1950's. Brought £120 from South Africa as capital for fishing. Prefers fishing because it is "a better business and I can get more money from it." Owns gill nets worth £90 and two canoes (one loaned to uncle); employs two boys as labourers and seven chickens. Has saved £20 (in a hole in the house). Income last year £200; next year expects £140. Present catch rate would give £400. Would like to buy motor boat if had the money.
- Agnew, S. The Distribution of Fishermen, Fish Traders, Cattle Keepers and Cotton Growers in Chief's Areas Mkhumbha and Nazomba: A Study of the Spatial Aspects of Cash Earning Enterprises in the Lacustrine Economy of the Southern Lake Chilwa Plain 1966-7. 1970, in press.
- Chipeta, W. "Labour and Capital in Counter Cyclical Behaviour Among Lake Chilwa Fishermen, 1968." 1968, cyclostyled.
- Colson, E. "The Role of Cattle Among the Plateau Tonga of Mazabuka District." Rhodes-Livingstone Journal, Vol. XI (1951).
- Firth, R. Malay Fishermen. London: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1966.
- Hill, P. Studies in Rural Capitalism in West Africa. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press. 1970.
- Kalk, M., ed. Decline and Recovery of a Lake: Chilwa Research 1966-70. Zomba: Government Printer, 1970.
- Klausen, A. M. Kerala Fishermen. London: Allen and Unwin, 1968.
- Malawi. National Statistical Office. Malawi Population Census 1966: Final Report Zomba: Government Printer, 1970.
- Mzumara, A. "The Lake Chilwa Fisheries." Society of Malawi Journal, Vol. XX, No. 1 (1967).
- Williams, T. D. "Commodity Distribution in Malawi: A Case Study." In I. G. Stewart, ed. Economic Development and Structural Change. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press, 1969.